Chevrolet "Royal Mail" in Washington Test.

W. C. Sills, manager of the Boston branch of the Chevrolet Motor Company, is in receipt of an extract from a Washington, D. C., newspaper of Jan. 23, regarding an exhibition on a 35 per cent grade which was erected leading from the street to the show-floor at the Washington Automobile Exhibition building. A number of cars tried to make this incline on high gear, but most of them dropped back into second and finally into low before reaching the top. One of the sales staff of the Henderson-Rowe company, Washington dealers, claimed that he could make the incline with a Chevrolet "Royal Mail" roadster on high, and made a bet to that effect with other dealers. Takcommittee of the Woman's Club a ing a 30-foot start and dropping almost immediately into high gear, the car shot up the incline and reached the top at a 25-mile speed.

This performance created such a sensation that the Chevrolet dealers were asked to repeat the performance on the following Sunday for the benefit of a moving picture concern, and the pictures of the performance are now being shown throughout the United States.
